

NOVEMBER 2026

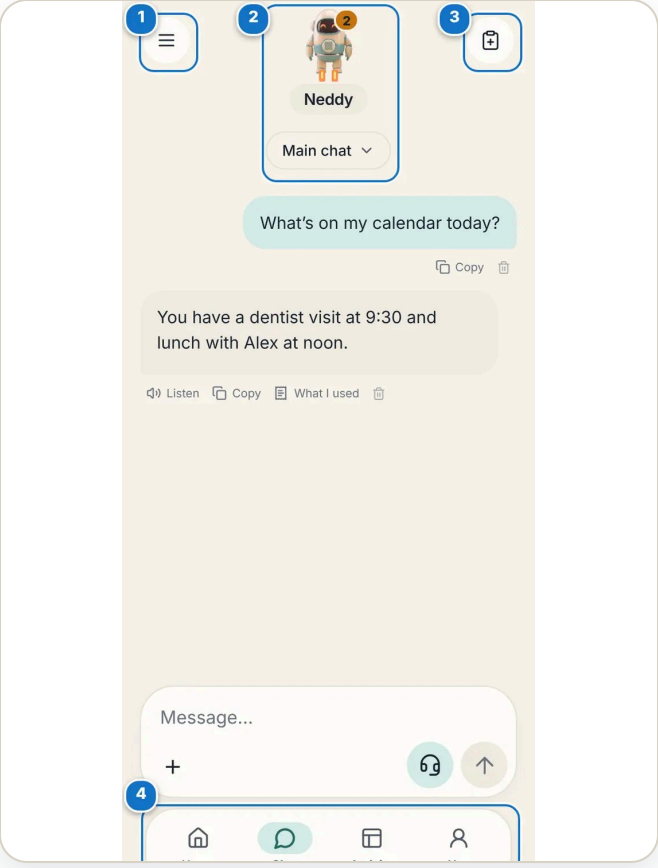

What’s new in Neddy

A friendly guide to everything that has changed, with pictures, for everyone who uses Neddy.

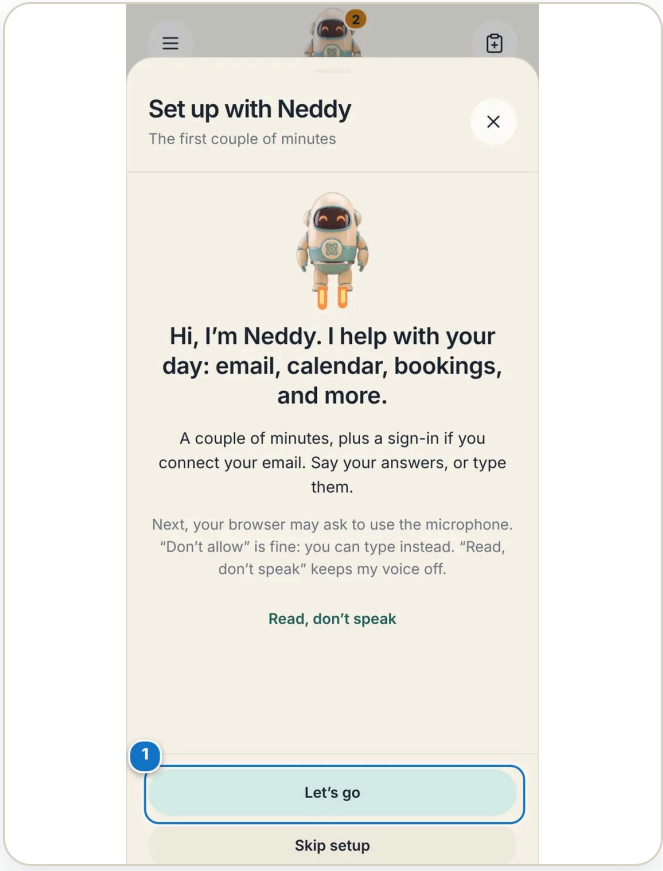

A new name, a new look, an easier way around

Neddy has a new look and a simpler layout, so the things you use most are one tap away.

- Four tabs. Home, Chat, Activity and You sit along the bottom. Everything else is in the ☰ Menu.
- Tap Neddy. The picture at the top of the screen takes you to everything about Neddy: what needs you, what's being worked on, what's coming up and what happened lately.
- Home shows what needs you. Approve or say no right on Home. A small number on Neddy says how many things are waiting.
- Set up with Neddy. The first time you open the app, Neddy asks a few short questions (your name, town, work, family) so it can help right away. Say your answers or type them.
- Neddy, everywhere. The sign-in email now comes from Neddy, and the whole app uses the new name.

Home: tap the numbered parts to find your way around.

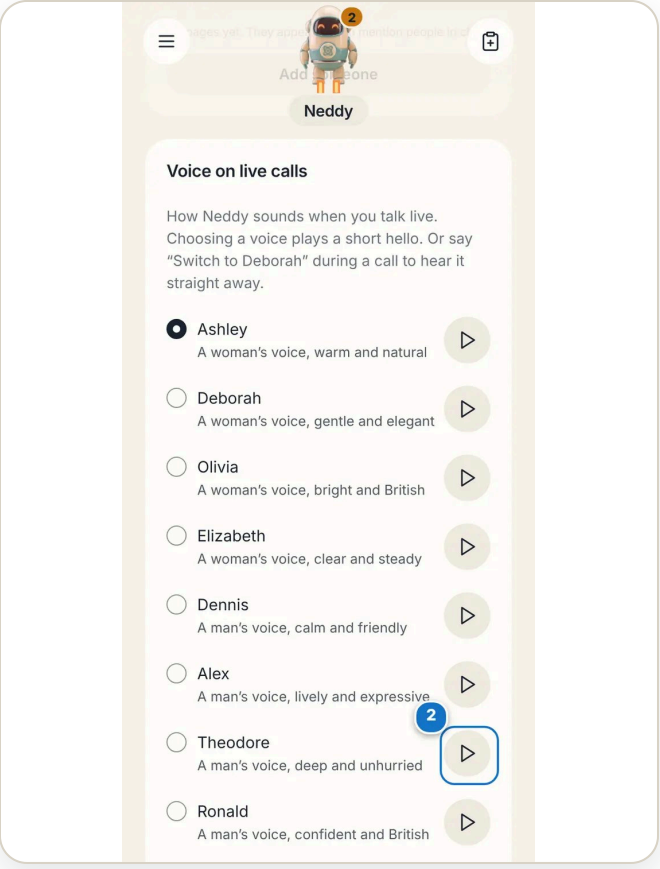

Set up with Neddy: a few short questions to begin.

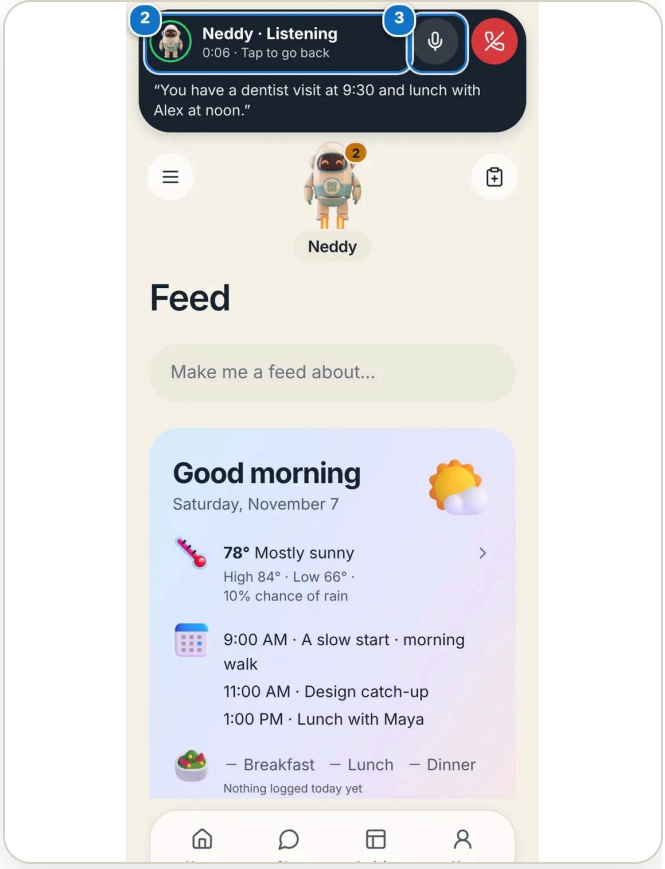

Talking with Neddy

Voice calls are the fastest way to get things done. A few things got easier.

- Pick a voice, or describe one. Say “Change your voice,” then say what you like: a woman’s voice, an accent, calm or lively. Neddy finds the closest ones, lets you hear them, and switches when you choose.
- Things Neddy shows you now appear on the call screen. When Neddy says “it’s on your screen,” it really is.
- Keep talking while you use the app. Shrink the call to a bar at the top. Tap it to bring the call back, or tap See it to look at anything Neddy showed you.
- Neddy greets you differently each time. No more the same hello on every call; the greeting changes, and in the morning or evening it may fit the time of day.
- Copy the transcript of a call with one tap.

Choose Neddy’s voice and hear each one first.

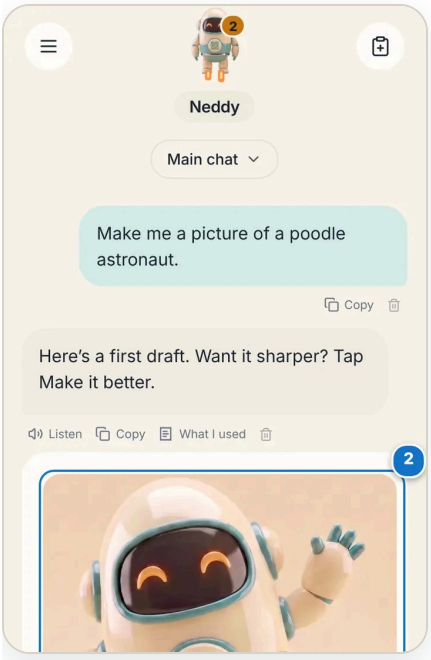

Shrink the call and keep using the app.

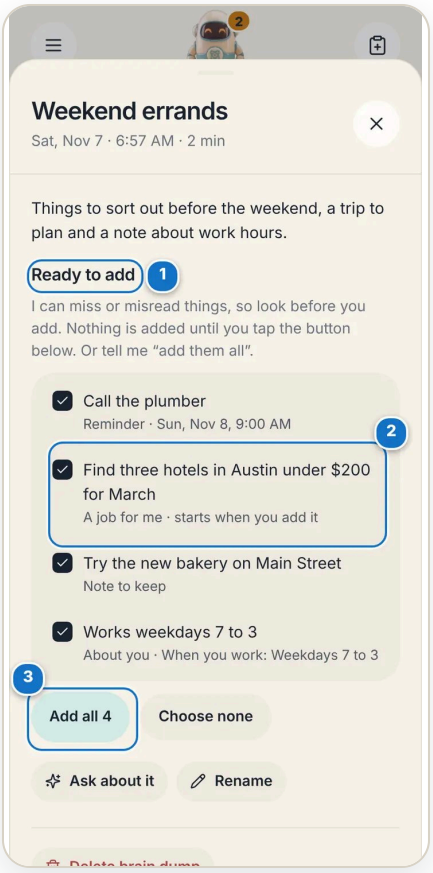

Make pictures, watch pages, think out loud

Neddy can now make things, keep an eye on things, and help you think.

- Pictures. Say what you want to see, like “a poodle astronaut above Earth.” Neddy makes it, saves it in your Files, and it moves gently. Tap Make it better for a sharper one. Your plan sets how many you can make each month.
- Watch a page or a price. “Tell me when the medium is back in stock.” Neddy checks and tells you when it comes true.
- Brain dump. Talk for as long as you like. Neddy sorts it into reminders, notes and jobs, and you choose what to add.
- Rehearse a hard conversation. Practise out loud with Neddy playing your boss, landlord or interviewer, then see how it went.

A picture Neddy made, saved in your Files.

Brain dump: talk it out, then choose what to keep.

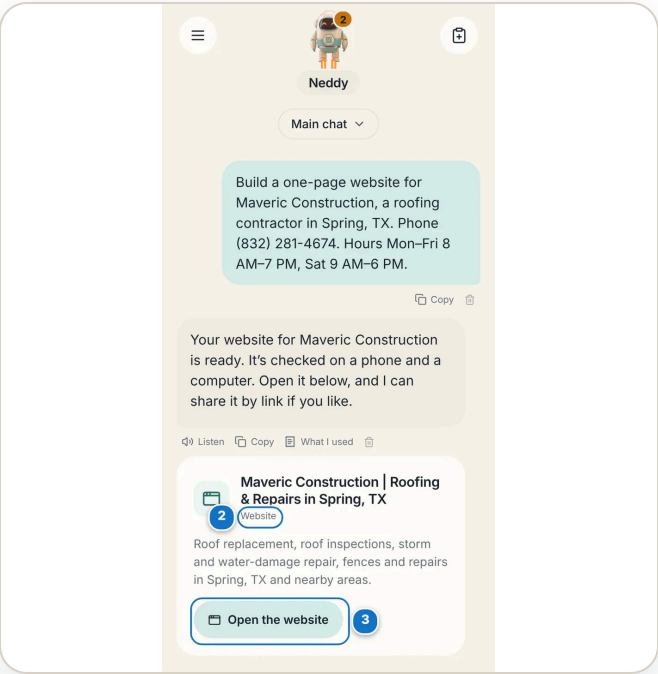

After a rehearsal: pace, filler words, and what to try next.

Websites for your business

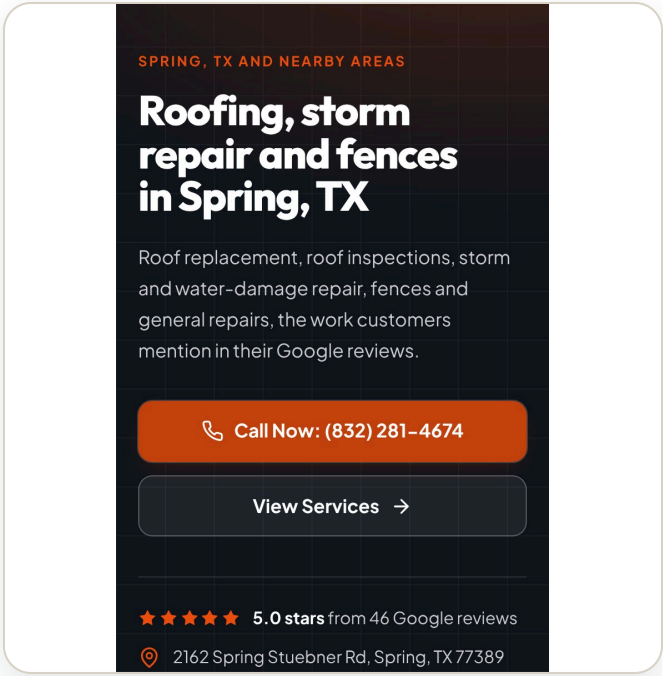

Ask Neddy for a one-page website for a business, and give the facts: the name, the town, a phone number, hours, services, reviews. Neddy builds it in the background and tells you when it’s ready.

- Only your facts. Neddy uses what you give it and nothing else: no invented years in business, awards, prices or reviews, and any review you supply is quoted word for word.
- Checked before you see it. The page is looked over by software, then drawn on a phone-sized and a computer-sized screen, and fixed if text is hard to read, buttons are too small or something runs off the side.
- A finished look. A real layout, matching fonts, a colour that suits the trade, and a Call button that appears where people look for it. No stock photos.
- Open it from the chat. Say “Show me the website,” then tap Open the website. You can ask Neddy to change it, or share it by link.

Honest limits: a build takes a few minutes and can take ten. You can have six builds in 24 hours. The page has no forms or photos. On a shared page, tapping the phone number or map link may not work yet. It lives on a share link that expires; it isn’t on its own web address.

Neddy tells you it’s ready: tap Open the website.

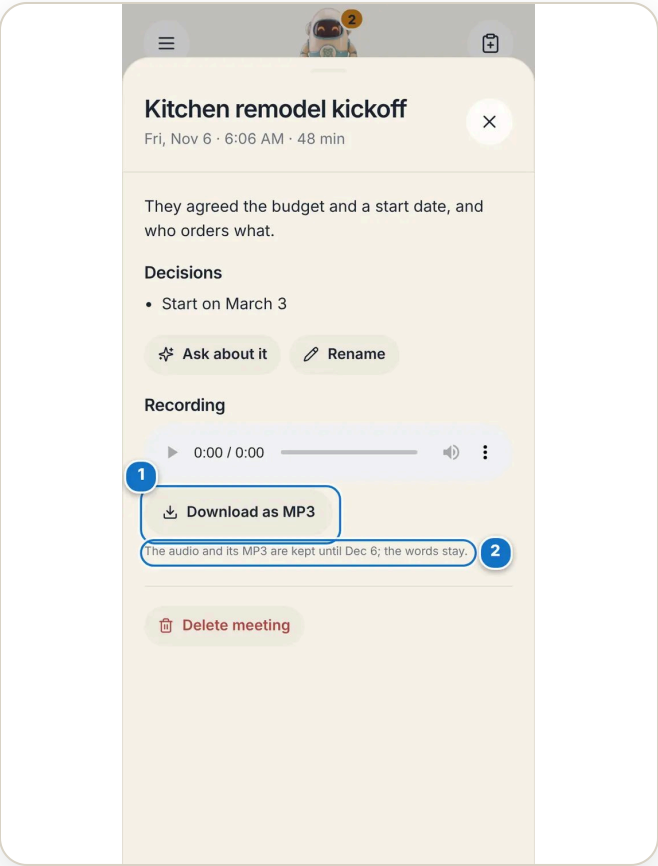

A sample page in the style Neddy’s websites are built to match, on a phone.

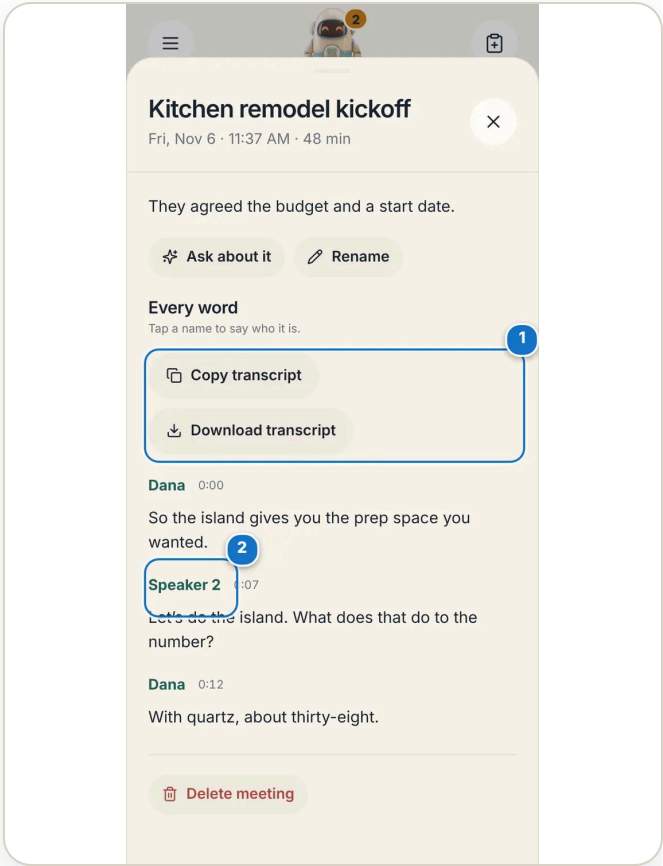

Meetings, files and email

Recorded meetings and big email jobs are easier to handle.

- Download a meeting's audio as one MP3 you can save, share or play anywhere.
- Download a meeting's transcript as a text file: the notes first, then every word with who said it and when.
- Recordings are safe. Audio stays on your device until the server has it, and the recorder tells you within seconds if something isn't sending.
- Move any amount of email. "Move all the newsletters from last year into a folder." Neddy finds every match on the server and moves them after one Approve, then checks the count.

Download the audio as an MP3.

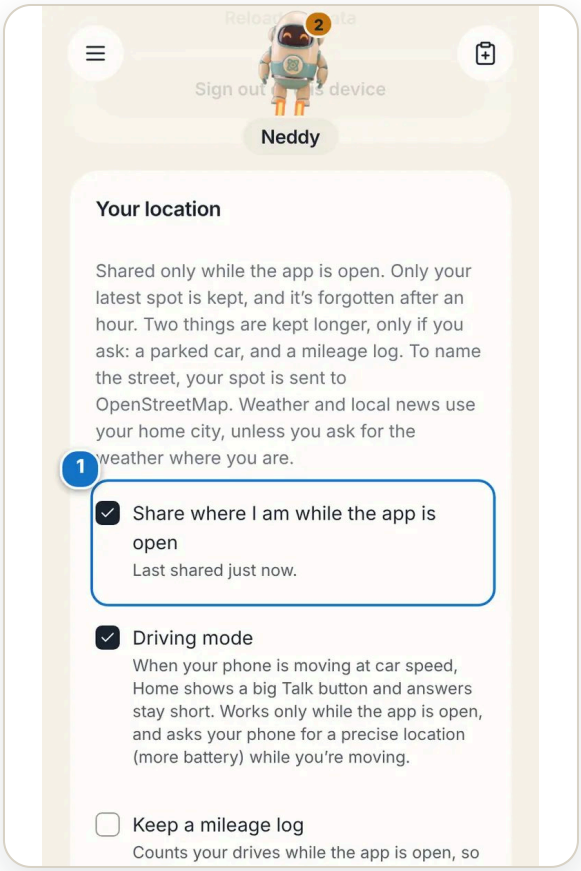

Download the transcript as a text file.

Neddy knows where you are, only if you let it

Turn on You › Account › Your location and Neddy can help with the things around you. It’s off until you turn it on, and it works only while the app is open on your screen.

> What’s kept: only your latest spot, forgotten after an hour or when you turn sharing off. Two things are kept longer, and only if you ask: a parked car (until you clear it or a week passes) and, if you turn it on, a mileage log (until you clear it). To name a street, your spot is sent to OpenStreetMap, a free map service.

Every one of these also works by voice, on a call or in the chat. The next pages cover them: parking, weather, what’s near you, telling someone where you are, hands-free driving, leaving on time, reminders for when you arrive, and a mileage log.

The Your location card, where you turn these on.

Parking, weather and the nearest pharmacy

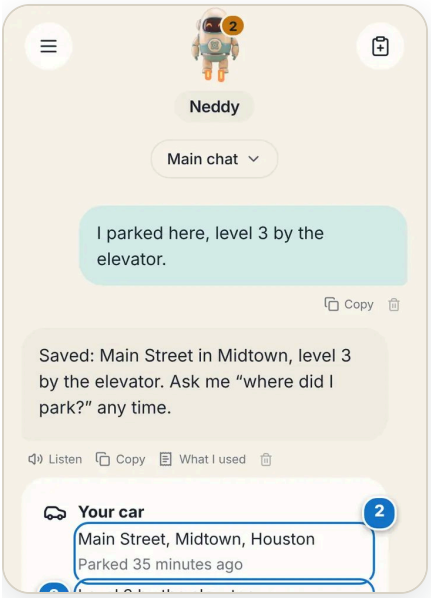

Ask the way you'd ask a friend.

"I parked here, level 3 by the elevator." … "Where did I park?"

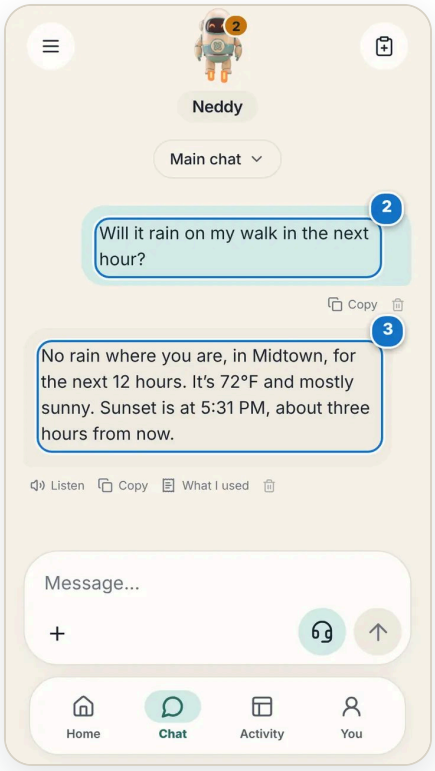

"Will it rain on my walk?" … "When's sunset here?"

"Where's the nearest pharmacy?" … "Find a coffee shop near me."

- Park my car. A card shows the street, how long ago, and a Directions button. Found it clears it.
- Weather where you are uses your spot, not your home city, and adds sunrise and sunset. US only.
- What's near you shows places on a map with how far and a rough walking time. The places come from OpenStreetMap, so check hours first when it matters.

Your parked car, with Directions.

Weather right where you are.

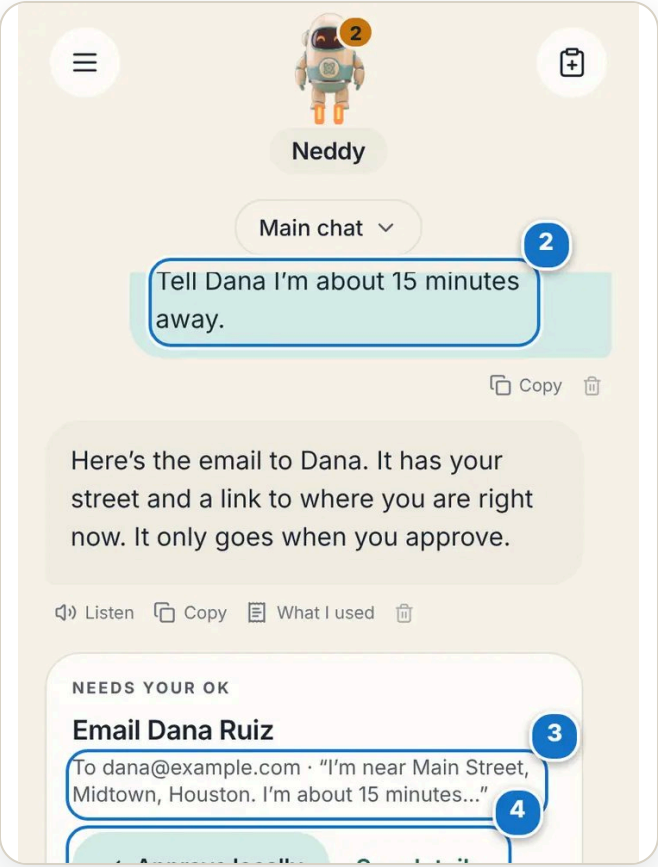

The nearest pharmacy, on a map.

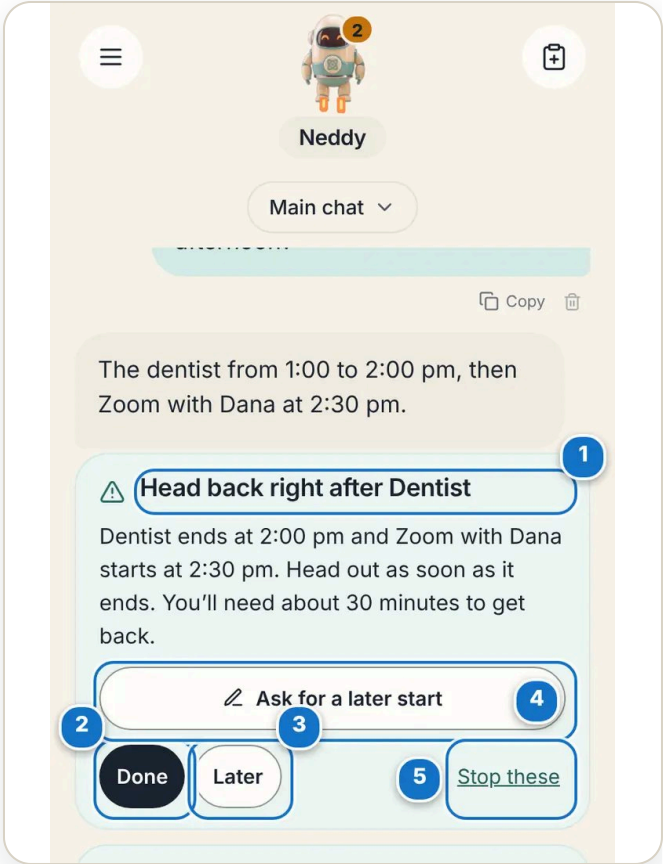

Telling someone you’re on your way

“Tell Dana I’m about 15 minutes away.” Neddy writes the email with your street, the time, and a link to where you are right now. It only goes when you tap Approve.

> The link shows where you are at that moment and doesn’t follow you. A time Neddy works out is a rough estimate from the distance, with no live traffic. It goes as an email, not a text.

The email Neddy writes, waiting for your OK.

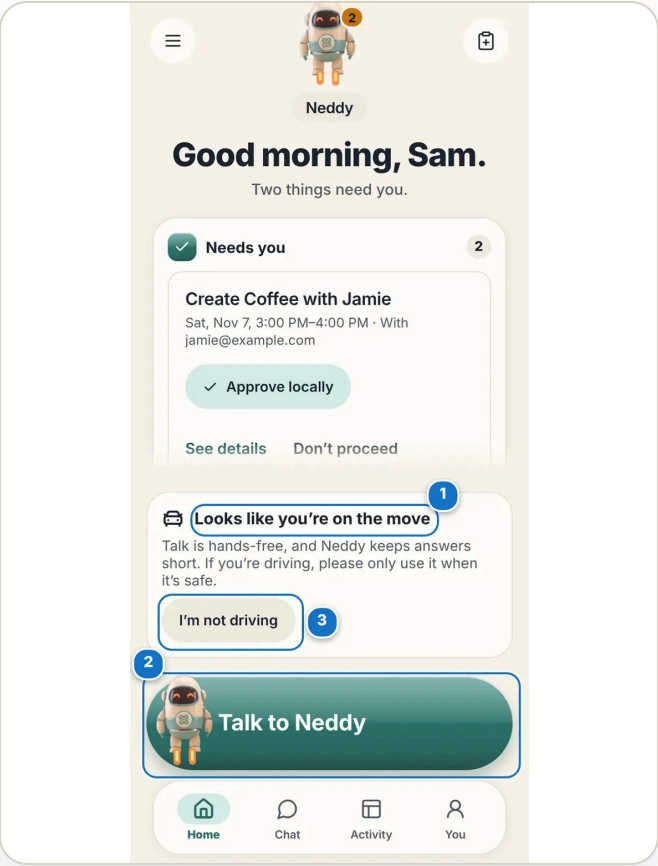

Heads-ups: Neddy tells you first about your day.

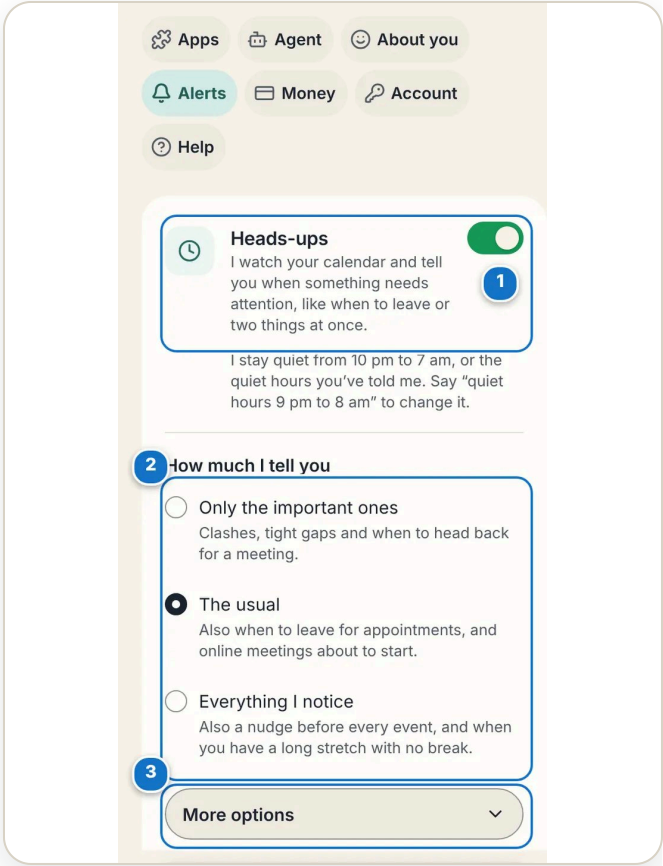

When you’re driving, and leaving on time

Two features for the road. Neddy can’t tell a driver from a passenger, so it shows what it saw and you’re always in charge.

- Hands-free driving mode. When your phone is moving at car speed, Home shows one big Talk button and Neddy keeps answers short. The type and record buttons are hidden on Home. Not driving? Tap I’m not driving (or say “I’m a passenger”). Please use it only when it’s safe.
- Leave on time. When an event has a street address and your phone has shared where you are, the “time to leave” heads-up uses how far you are by car, as a rough guess with no live traffic. Without that, it uses your usual travel time, as before.

Home while you’re on the move.

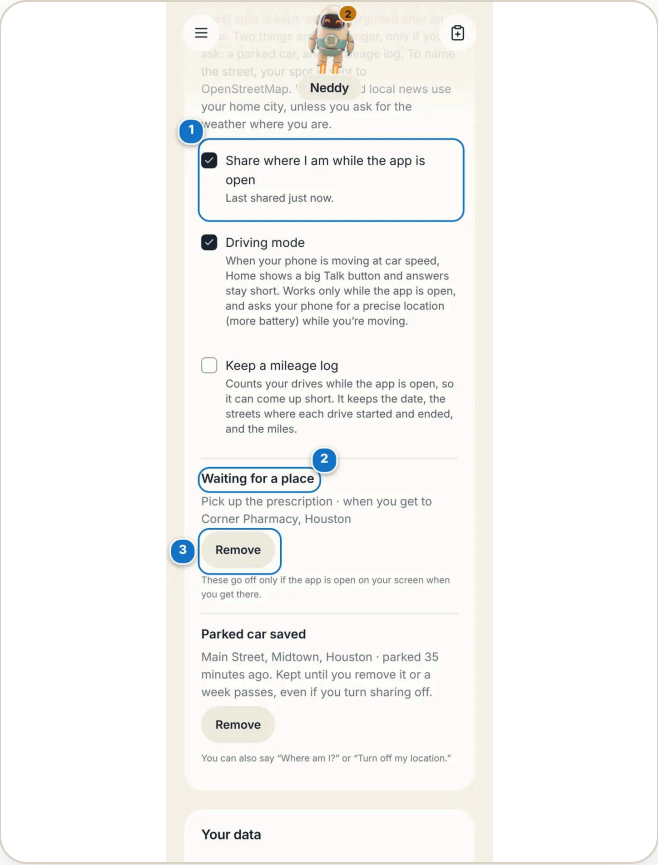

Heads-up settings: choose what Neddy tells you.

Reminders for when you arrive, and a mileage log

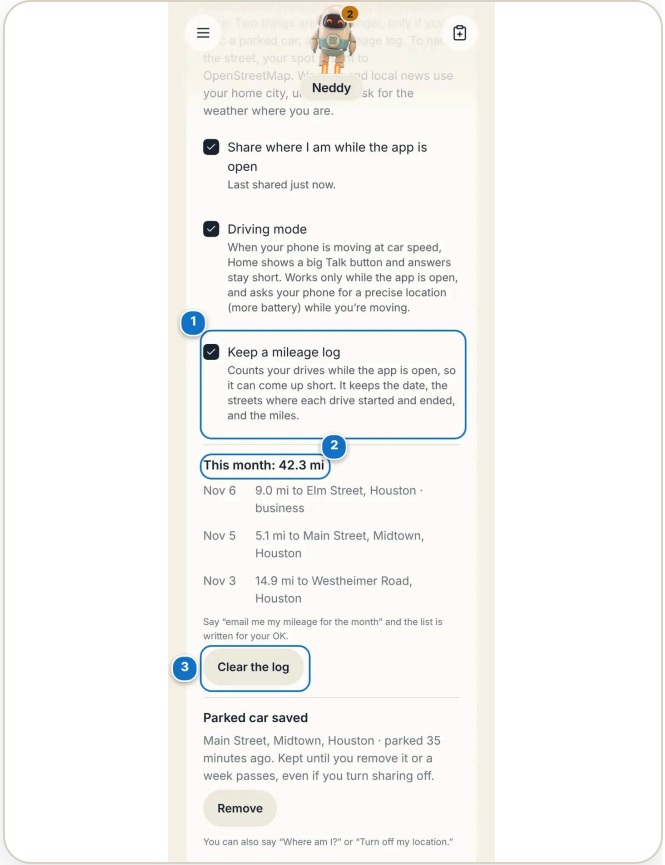

Two more things Neddy does with your location.

- Reminders for when you arrive. “Remind me to pick up the prescription when I get to Corner Pharmacy.” Name a real place or an address. You can have ten waiting, they’re kept two weeks, and you see and remove them under Your location.
- A mileage log. Turn it on, and Neddy adds up your drives. Ask “How many miles have I driven so far?” or “Email me my mileage for the year,” and Neddy writes you an email with every trip, ready for your OK (it needs Gmail or Outlook connected). It shows distances only, not money.

> The honest limit: both work only while the app is open on your screen. A reminder can miss you if the app is closed when you arrive, and a drive made with the app closed isn’t counted, so mileage totals can come up short. A drive appears a few minutes after you stop. For anything that must happen, set a time reminder as well.

Reminders waiting for a place, with a Remove button.

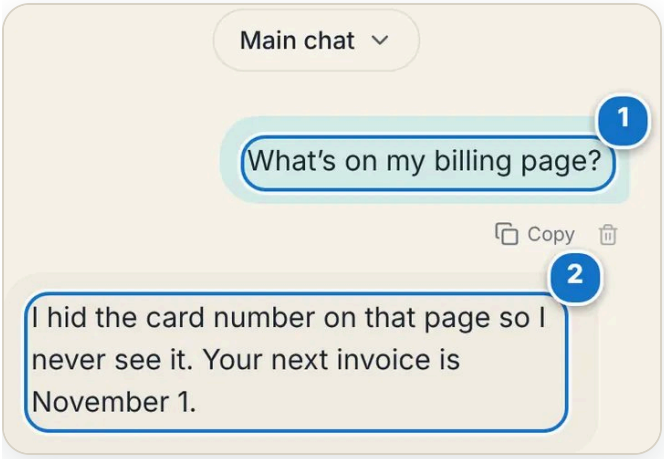

Your mileage log: this month’s miles and recent drives.

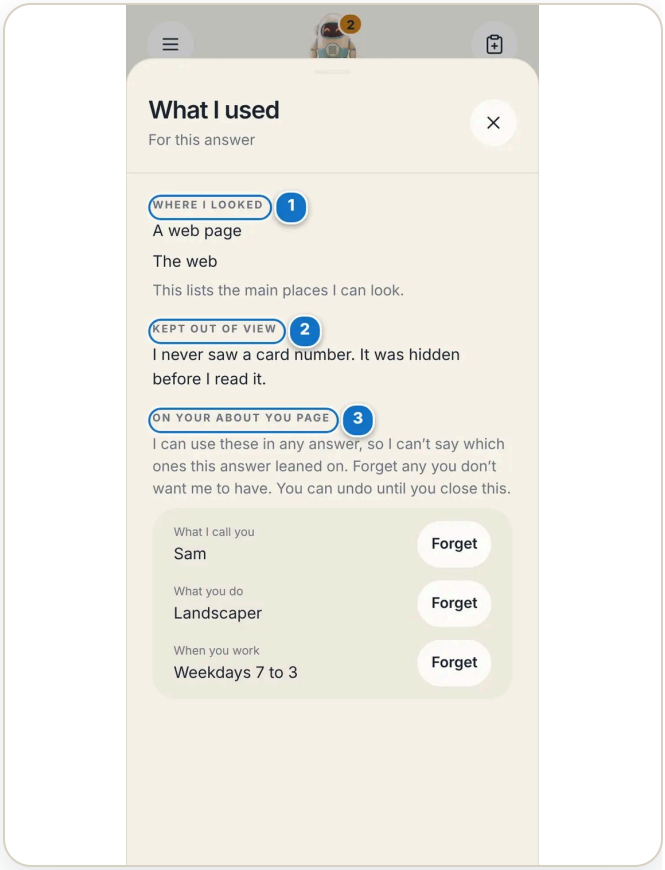

Your privacy

Neddy is built to keep what's yours private.

- Card numbers and passwords stay hidden. Card, Social Security, bank and ID numbers, passwords, PINs and keys are hidden before the AI sees them, and Neddy tells you once when it hid something.
- What I used. Under an answer, tap What I used to see where Neddy looked, what it kept out of view, and what it knows about you, with a button to forget any of it.
- You decide on location. It's off until you turn it on, and one tap turns it off and forgets where you were.

Hidden before the AI sees it.

See what Neddy used, and forget it.

Good to know

- Help is built in. Open ☰ Menu › Help & how-to, or just ask Neddy: “How do I turn on my location?” Every new feature has a Help page with pictures like the ones here.
- Location works while the app is open. If you want something to happen at a set time, ask for a time reminder too.
- Maps and places come from OpenStreetMap, a free map that people keep up to date. A place can be missing, and hours can be out of date: call first when it matters.
- No live traffic. Drive times are rough guesses from distance.
- You’re always asked first. Neddy never sends an email or changes your calendar without your OK.
- Tell us what you think. If something doesn’t work the way this guide says, tell the person who invited you.

Thank you for trying Neddy.